Man fights ex-wife for custody of child

A man has asked the Court of Appeal to deny his former wife custody of their only child because she allegedly abused him physically. The Kenyan man, who was given the custody of the child by High Court judge David Onyancha, told appellate judges Philip Tunoi, Moijo ole Keiwua and Erastus Githinji that their son denounced his British mother and expressed his wish to stay with him. But the woman says the man has a history of abusing drugs and should not be given custody of the child.
